The book We Beat the Streets by Drs. Sampson Davis, George Jenkins, and Rameck Hunt is a true story. This book is about three boys who have struggled throughout their lives to accomplish something. Like in the beginning of the book Rameck got in a fight in his new school, Sampson got his foot crushed by a 200 pound concrete slab crushed his foot, and George just did good in school for now. Once they get to middle school their lives cross and they become the best of friends but they get in trouble a lot. When they get kicked out of class one day they go to pull a prank but the principal and they said they were going to the library. When they get there they listen to the presentation to Senton Hall and they all liked it and agreed to go. They all got accepted into the school and passed with flying colors but they went to medical school for different training. Sampson and Rameck went to become doctors while George goes to become a dentist. When they all graduate medical school, they kept in touch but got jobs in different places.
A passage that inspired me as this part on page 51 and it reads” ‘Welcome young brothers,’ he began. He lined up the boys, then showed them different Kung Fu moves and how to relax by closing their eyes and breathing deeply. Sampson inhaled and listened carefully as Reggie spoke. ‘Calm your mind,’ he said quietly.’ Forget about outside problems. Concentrate your thoughts on a positive flow of energy.’ ‘You gonna teach us how to fight?’ Razor asked. ‘no,’ Reggie replied’ I'm going to teach you how to live.’ (Drs. Davis, Jenkins, and Hunt pg. 51).
Inspiring Passage

This inspires me because it is like saying that in life fights are worthless and just live your life. What I got out of this book is that it doesn't matter how many struggles you have in life. You can always achieve great things if you work hard and never give up on what you're doing.
I would recommend this book to anyone who believes that working hard can help you in life and that if they have a dream they want to reach, don’t give up because the three doctors didn’t.
